We have lost tools in the bottom of the borehole and after a month of fishing we have abandoned the attempt to fish the tools out. We then attempted to put a whipstock down the hole in order to drill around the tools. However, our whipstock became stuck at 1480' and we ended up drilling back into the original borehole. We now propose to P & A the Kobe 22 State #1 by filling the borehole from 1892' to 485' with spacing gel and cementing from 485' to 385' covering the bottom of the casing and then set another plug from 100 feet to surface. Also, we plan on putting the dry hole marker up after we drill the new borehole which will be 50 feet away to the west.
