THE DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

July 4, 1776

When in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.

That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

Prudence, in such a case, dictates that慎重 should be exercised; and that no step should be taken which the great Director of human Affairs will be pleased to approve. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them to absolute Tyranny, it is their duty to throw off such Government, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

Now, in the second year of their independence, they stand united as one people, and they declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

They declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

They declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

They declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

They declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

They declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

They declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

They declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

They declare that they are free, and that they will maintain their freedom by the sword if necessary.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, we have hereunto set our hands and seals, this fourth day of July, 1776.
