PHYSICS 551

PHYSICS 551 is a course in quantum mechanics. It covers the basic principles of quantum mechanics, including wave mechanics, matrix mechanics, and the theory of angular momentum. The course is designed for students who have completed a course in classical mechanics and are interested in the foundations of quantum physics.

The course is divided into several sections. The first section deals with the wave function and the Schrödinger equation. The second section covers the theory of angular momentum and the addition of angular momenta. The third section discusses the theory of perturbation theory and the approximation methods. The fourth section deals with the theory of scattering and the partial wave expansion. The fifth section covers the theory of identical particles and the Pauli exclusion principle.

The course is taught by Professor [Name], who is an expert in the field of quantum mechanics. He has published numerous papers on the subject and has supervised many graduate students. The course is highly regarded by students and faculty alike for its rigorous treatment of the subject matter. The course is a prerequisite for the graduate course in quantum field theory.

The course is held in the Physics Department building, room 551. The lectures are held on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 10:00 AM to 11:30 AM. The course is open to all students who have completed the prerequisite course. The course is a required course for students who are majoring in physics.
