Dear Florene Davidson, New Mexico Oil Conservation Commission,

With regard to fracking notification rules.

I basically consider fracking to be earth-buggering. I can only imagine being held against a wall, with my shorts to the ground, while Halliburton gives me the big red hose. The only difference is New Mexico's been frucked so many times ..so carelessly, so dispassionately. Do you think the poor state looks over her shoulder any more, to see who's doing the damage and with what. The disease is in her blood now ...she is toxic to the bone and you know they'll never stop. Ask!? Why, to know how frucked you really are. Like the aspen forest ...all sisters, all connected, the water you toxify today is the water we drink tomorrow and the volatiles we'll breath next week. The noble trees, the grasses, the cattle and ranchers ..all against the wall, all asking ...is it too late. I'm not interested in how you're making a superfund state, I'm interested in how you'll stop it. Maybe, knowledge is a good first step.
