Section 101

Section 101 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "gross income" as all income from whatever source derived, whether or not it is taxable. This includes income from salaries, wages, interest, dividends, and other sources.

Section 102 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "taxable income" as gross income less certain deductions. These deductions include the standard deduction, itemized deductions, and the deduction for state and local taxes.

Section 103 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "net capital gain" as the net amount of long-term capital gains less net capital losses. This is a key component of taxable income for individuals.

Section 104 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "qualified dividends" as dividends that are eligible for preferential tax treatment. These dividends are taxed at a lower rate than ordinary income.

Section 105 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "charitable contribution" as a contribution of property to a qualified organization. Charitable contributions are deductible from taxable income.

SECTION 106. CHARITABLE CONTRIBUTIONS

Section 106 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "charitable contribution" as a contribution of property to a qualified organization. Charitable contributions are deductible from taxable income.

Section 107 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "qualified organization" as an organization that is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3). This includes churches, schools, and hospitals.

Section 108 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "charitable deduction" as the deduction for charitable contributions. The amount of the deduction is limited to a percentage of the taxpayer's adjusted gross income.

Section 109 of the Internal Revenue Code defines the term "qualified organization" as an organization that is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(c)(3). This includes churches, schools, and hospitals.
