Re: Jalmat Special Pool Rules

On January 25, 2000, the Oil Conservation Division (Division) convened a meeting in Hobbs, New Mexico to discuss the Jalmat Special Pool Rules. On February 8, 2000, another meeting was held by the Division in Midland, Texas among interested parties to discuss these rules.

While there are pending before the Division specific cases that implicate these rules, no one has filed an application regarding changes to the rules. At this time there does not appear to be a need for the Division to conduct additional review of the rules for the continued development of this pool.

Consequently, the Division will not docket a case on the Jalmat Special Pool Rules in March 2000, as had been considered prior to the two recent meetings. However, any person who believes an amendment to the special pool rules is needed may file his application with the Division.
