Mountainair is the center of some excitement these days. Pacific West Exploration has come to town to conduct seismic oil studies. Our sources tell us that they will be working around the county for the better part of a year. Western Drilling is also still working northeast of Mountainair, with plans to sink two more holes to go along with the one which has already found a moderate amount of oil.

Let's hope that the people of Mountainair will remember their poor cousins in the Estancia Valley if a gusher comes in!
