THE JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE

Volume 100, Part 1, 2000

The Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute is a peer-reviewed journal of research in human evolution, primatology, and human biology. It is published quarterly by the Royal Anthropological Society, which was founded in 1871. The journal is one of the leading journals in the field of human evolution and is read by a wide range of scientists and scholars.

The Journal is divided into two main sections: 'Human Evolution' and 'Primatology'. The 'Human Evolution' section covers a wide range of topics, including the origins of the human species, the evolution of the human brain, and the evolution of human culture. The 'Primatology' section covers research on the behavior and biology of non-human primates.

The Journal is edited by Professor Colin P. Groves, who is a leading expert in the field of human evolution. The Journal is also supported by a number of advisory boards, including the British Academy, the Royal Society, and the American Academy of Arts and Sciences.

The Journal is published by the Royal Anthropological Society, which is a charitable organization that promotes the study of human evolution and primatology. The Society has a long history of publishing research in the field and is one of the leading organizations in the world for the study of human evolution.

The Journal is available in both print and online formats. The print version is published quarterly and is available to subscribers. The online version is available to all users and is updated regularly with new research. The Journal is also available in a number of other languages, including French, German, and Spanish.

The Journal is a key resource for researchers in the field of human evolution and primatology. It provides a platform for the publication of original research and for the discussion of new ideas. The Journal is also a valuable resource for students and scholars who are interested in the field.

The Journal is a member of the International Union of Pure and Applied Chemistry (IUPAC) and the International Union of Pure and Applied Physics (IUPAP). It is also a member of the International Union of Pure and Applied Biology (IUPAB) and the International Union of Pure and Applied Mathematics (IUPAM).
