

square meters is the estimated density in the 400 X 400 ft pad. The possibility of subsurface remains in this deflated area also seems unlikely. LA 47675 has been termed a "site" for management purposes; in reality this cultural resource consists of numerous smaller re-occupations of the landform over several thousand years which grade into each other spatially. Given the extremely low density of the artifactual remains in the impact zone and the complete lack of cultural or temporal diagnostics which could demonstrate a relationship with a specific occupation within the site, these remains must be viewed as possessing very little significance.