2. Once the problem is identified, the next step is to develop a plan. This involves setting goals, identifying resources, and determining the steps that need to be taken to address the problem.

3. The third step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress to ensure that the goals are being met.

4. Finally, the fourth step is to evaluate the results. This involves assessing the effectiveness of the plan and making adjustments as needed to improve the outcome.

Detailed description of Figure 1: The graph plots the percentage of total catch against the percentage of total effort for five different fishing scenarios. The x-axis represents 'Percentage of total effort' from 0 to 100. The y-axis represents 'Percentage of total catch' from 0 to 100. The legend identifies the following series:

- Yellow perch: Represented by a solid line with open circles. It shows a steep initial increase in catch percentage as effort increases, reaching approximately 80% catch at 20% effort, and then levels off.
- Rock bass: Represented by a dashed line with open squares. It shows a similar trend to yellow perch but with a slightly lower catch percentage for the same effort level.
- Rock bass + yellow perch: Represented by a dotted line with open triangles. This series shows a higher catch percentage than either species alone, reaching about 90% catch at 20% effort.
- Rock bass + yellow perch + white perch: Represented by a dash-dot line with open diamonds. This series shows the highest catch percentage for low effort, reaching nearly 100% catch at 20% effort.
- White perch: Represented by a solid line with crosses. This series shows a more gradual, nearly linear increase in catch percentage with effort, reaching about 50% catch at 50% effort.

the first two years after the onset of symptoms. The mean age at onset was 60 years, and the mean duration of illness was 7.8 years. The prevalence of depression was 29% among patients with rheumatoid arthritis, compared with 10% among healthy controls ($p < .001$). Depression was associated with longer disease duration ($r = .28$, $p < .001$) and higher levels of disability ($r = .31$, $p < .001$). In addition, depression was associated with lower levels of physical activity ($r = -.25$, $p < .001$) and lower levels of social support ($r = -.22$, $p < .001$). These associations remained significant after controlling for demographic factors and clinical variables.

DISCUSSION AND CONCLUSIONS

The results of this study indicate that there is a high prevalence of depression among patients with rheumatoid arthritis. This finding is consistent with previous research showing that the prevalence of depression ranges from 10% to 30% among patients with rheumatoid arthritis [1, 2].

In addition, the results of this study suggest that depression is associated with longer disease duration, higher levels of disability, lower levels of physical activity, and lower levels of social support. These findings are consistent with previous research showing that depression is associated with worse outcomes in patients with rheumatoid arthritis [3, 4].
