RESEARCH REPORT ON THE

Development of a new method for the determination of the concentration of a substance in a mixture. The method is based on the use of a special reagent which reacts with the substance to form a colored compound. The color intensity is measured and compared with a standard curve.

The method is simple and rapid and can be used for the determination of a wide range of substances. It is particularly suitable for the determination of substances in biological fluids.

The results of the experiments show that the method is accurate and precise. The detection limit is very low and the range of concentrations over which the method can be used is wide.

The method is suitable for the determination of a wide range of substances. It is particularly suitable for the determination of substances in biological fluids.
