1. The first part of the document is a letter from the President of the United States to the Congress, dated January 3, 1862.

The President's message is a long and detailed one, covering a wide range of subjects. It begins with a statement of the President's duty to report on the state of the Union, and then proceeds to discuss the various branches of the government, the judiciary, and the military.

The President also discusses the state of the Union, and the progress of the war. He mentions the fact that the Union is now at war with the seceding states, and that the war is now in its second year.
