2.1.1. The 2008 financial crisis

The 2008 financial crisis was a global economic event that began in the United States in late 2007 and spread worldwide. It was characterized by a sharp decline in stock prices, a credit crunch, and a recession. The crisis was caused by a combination of factors, including excessive risk-taking by financial institutions, the subprime mortgage crisis, and the collapse of Lehman Brothers. The impact of the crisis was severe, with a significant loss of jobs and a decline in economic growth. The UK economy was particularly affected, with a sharp decline in GDP and a rise in unemployment. The crisis led to a loss of confidence in the financial system and a need for government intervention to stabilize the economy.
