THE JOINT COMMISSION ON THE ECONOMY OF THE UNITED STATES

The Joint Commission on the Economy of the United States was established by the President and the Congress in 1961. Its purpose was to study the economic conditions of the United States and to make recommendations for improving the economy. The Commission was composed of members from both the President's and the Congress's staffs. It held numerous public hearings and received many suggestions from the public. The Commission's report, "The Joint Commission on the Economy of the United States," was published in January 1964. It contains a detailed analysis of the economy and a series of recommendations for improving it. The report is divided into two volumes. Volume I, "The Joint Commission on the Economy of the United States," contains the Commission's findings and recommendations. Volume II, "The Joint Commission on the Economy of the United States," contains the Commission's report to the President and the Congress.
