Dear Mr. Odom:

In answer to your letter of October 1, 1965 regarding the above well.

Before we can give you a plugging program, we need some additional information on the well, such as the total depth, amount of open hole and/or perforations and the treatment given each zone tested, and approximately how much casing that you anticipate recovering.

The above information should be reported on Commission Forms C-105 and C-103 respectfully, a supply of each is enclosed. Form C-103 is to be used for the Notice of Intention to Plug as well as for the plugging report.

Very truly yours,

OIL CONSERVATION COMMISSION

The concentration of the Agrobacterium suspension was 10⁶ cells/ml (○), 10⁷ cells/ml (□), 10⁸ cells/ml (△), and 10⁹ cells/ml (◇). The error bars represent the standard deviation of three independent experiments.

Dear friend,
I have been thinking about you a great deal lately.
I hope you are well and happy.
I am still working hard, but I will try to write more often.

1. The first step in the process of identifying a problem is to define the problem. This involves identifying the symptoms of the problem and determining the scope of the problem. Once the problem has been defined, the next step is to identify the causes of the problem. This involves identifying the factors that are contributing to the problem and determining the underlying causes. Once the causes have been identified, the next step is to develop a plan of action. This involves identifying the steps that need to be taken to solve the problem and determining the resources that will be needed to implement the plan. Finally, the last step in the process is to implement the plan and monitor the results. This involves putting the plan into action and tracking the progress of the solution. Once the problem has been solved, the final step is to evaluate the results and determine if the solution was effective. This involves comparing the results of the solution to the original problem and determining if the problem has been solved. If the problem has not been solved, the process may need to be repeated.
