It is the policy of the Army to maintain a high standard of efficiency in its personnel and to ensure that all personnel are properly trained and equipped for their duties. This policy is based on the principle that the Army is a fighting organization and must be prepared to meet any emergency. Therefore, it is essential that all personnel be kept up to date in their knowledge and skills. This requires a continuous program of training and education. The Army will therefore continue to invest in the training and education of its personnel and will ensure that all personnel are given the opportunity to improve themselves. This will be done through a variety of means, including classroom instruction, on-the-job training, and self-study. The Army will also ensure that all personnel are given the opportunity to participate in physical training and sports. This will help to build character and discipline, and will also help to improve the overall health and fitness of the personnel. The Army will continue to strive for excellence in all its activities and will ensure that it is always ready to meet any challenge.
