THE HISTORY OF THE CITY OF NEW YORK FROM 1624 TO 1898

The history of the city of New York from 1624 to 1898 is a story of growth and development. It begins with the first Dutch settlement in 1624, when a group of Dutch men, led by Willem Kieft, established a trading post on the site of present-day Manhattan. The settlement was named Nieuw Amsterdam, and it grew rapidly as more Dutch men and women came to live there. By 1674, the city had become a major center of trade and commerce in the New World.

In 1674, the city was transferred to British control, and it was renamed New York. The British made the city a major center of government and commerce, and it grew even more rapidly. By 1790, the city had become the largest city in the United States. In 1790, the city was incorporated as the City of New York, and it became the capital of the state. The city continued to grow and develop, and it became a major center of industry and commerce in the world.

In 1898, the city was incorporated as the City of New York, and it became the largest city in the United States. The city continued to grow and develop, and it became a major center of industry and commerce in the world. The city was a major center of government and commerce, and it was a major center of culture and education. The city was a major center of the world, and it was a major center of the future.
