The first two studies of the present series (Waters and Goss, 1969; Goss and Waters, 1970) have shown that the in vitro production of the in vivo response to the in vivo antigen is dependent on the presence of the in vivo antigen in the in vitro system. The present study was designed to determine whether the in vitro response to the in vivo antigen is dependent on the presence of the in vivo antigen in the in vitro system. The results of the present study show that the in vitro response to the in vivo antigen is dependent on the presence of the in vivo antigen in the in vitro system. The results of the present study show that the in vitro response to the in vivo antigen is dependent on the presence of the in vivo antigen in the in vitro system.
