THE JOURNAL OF CONSERVATION

Volume 1, No. 1, 1968

Published by the American Society of Conservationists

The Journal of Conservation is a quarterly publication devoted to the study and management of natural resources. It is the only journal in the field that is both peer-reviewed and published by a non-profit organization. The journal's primary concern is the conservation of the natural environment, and it publishes original research, reviews, and essays on a wide range of topics related to conservation.

Editor: J. H. R. Taylor, University of Cambridge
