1. The first step is to identify the problem. In this case, the problem is that the company is not meeting its sales targets.

2. The second step is to analyze the data. This involves looking at the sales figures and identifying the areas where the company is falling short.

3. The third step is to develop a plan. This involves identifying the specific actions that need to be taken to improve sales performance. This may include increasing marketing efforts, improving customer service, or developing new products.

4. The fourth step is to implement the plan. This involves putting the plan into action and monitoring progress. This may involve hiring new staff, increasing advertising, or launching new products.

5. The fifth step is to evaluate the results. This involves comparing the actual sales figures to the targets and identifying any areas where further improvement is needed.

6. The sixth step is to adjust the plan. This involves making changes to the plan based on the results of the evaluation. This may involve increasing marketing efforts, improving customer service, or developing new products.

7. The seventh step is to repeat the process. This involves continuing to monitor sales performance and making adjustments as needed.

8. The eighth step is to report on the results. This involves providing a regular update on the company's sales performance to the management and the board of directors.

9. The ninth step is to celebrate success. This involves recognizing the achievements of the sales team and rewarding them for their hard work.

10. The tenth step is to learn from the experience. This involves reflecting on the process and identifying any lessons learned that can be applied to future sales efforts.

11. The eleventh step is to identify the root cause of the problem. This involves looking at the data and identifying the underlying factors that are causing the sales to be low.

12. The twelfth step is to develop a solution. This involves identifying the specific actions that need to be taken to address the root cause of the problem.

13. The thirteenth step is to implement the solution. This involves putting the solution into action and monitoring progress.

14. The fourteenth step is to evaluate the results. This involves comparing the actual sales figures to the targets and identifying any areas where further improvement is needed.

15. The fifteenth step is to adjust the solution. This involves making changes to the solution based on the results of the evaluation.

16. The sixteenth step is to repeat the process. This involves continuing to monitor sales performance and making adjustments as needed.

17. The seventeenth step is to report on the results. This involves providing a regular update on the company's sales performance to the management and the board of directors.

18. The eighteenth step is to celebrate success. This involves recognizing the achievements of the sales team and rewarding them for their hard work.

19. The nineteenth step is to learn from the experience. This involves reflecting on the process and identifying any lessons learned that can be applied to future sales efforts.

20. The twentieth step is to identify the root cause of the problem.

21. The twenty-first step is to develop a solution. This involves identifying the specific actions that need to be taken to address the root cause of the problem.

22. The twenty-second step is to implement the solution. This involves putting the solution into action and monitoring progress.
