THE JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE

Volume 100, Part 1, 2000

The Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute is a peer-reviewed journal of research in human evolution, primatology, and human variation. It is published quarterly by the Royal Anthropological Society. The journal is a key source of information for researchers and students in the field of human evolution and anthropology.

The journal is divided into two main sections: 'Human Evolution' and 'Human Variation'. The 'Human Evolution' section covers topics such as the origins of the human species, the evolution of the human brain, and the evolution of human culture. The 'Human Variation' section covers topics such as the genetic variation within and between human populations, the evolution of human language, and the evolution of human social behaviour.

The journal is edited by Professor Colin P. Groves, who is a leading expert in the field of human evolution and anthropology. The journal is also reviewed by a panel of experts in the field.

The journal is a key source of information for researchers and students in the field of human evolution and anthropology. It is also a key source of information for the general public, as it provides a clear and accessible overview of the latest research in the field.
