This well treated with 1000 gallons of acid on August 29, 1936. Immediately after the treatment it produced 17 barrels of fluid per hour, 50% water. The well soon became loaded with water and died. It could not be made to flow for more than a few hours at a time after swabbing. The hole was plugged back from 3905' to 3872'. The well failed to produce when swabbed dry after the cement had set. It is proposed to treat this well with 4000 gallons of acid to open up the formation above the cement plug.
