

ABSTRACT

An intensive archaeological survey of eight oil well drilling locations and attendant vehicle and powerline access routes was conducted in Lea County, New Mexico for the Continental Oil Company. All survey locations are on private lands under lease to Continental Oil Company and with Federal mineral rights administered by the Bureau of Land Management, Roswell District. No significant archaeological resources were observed and it is recommended that archaeological clearance to the surveyed locations be given.