THEORY OF THE EARTH AND ITS HISTORY

CHAPTER I. OF THE ORIGIN OF THE EARTH.

The origin of the earth is a subject which has attracted the attention of philosophers and poets alike. The ancients were content with fables, but the moderns have sought for a more rational explanation. The question is, how did the earth come into existence? and from what materials was it formed?

SECTION I. OF THE ORIGIN OF THE EARTH.

The first question which presents itself is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

It is evident that the earth is not eternal, and that it must have had a beginning.

The second question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The third question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The fourth question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The fifth question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The sixth question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The seventh question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The eighth question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The ninth question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The tenth question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.

The eleventh question is, whether the earth was created out of nothing, or whether it was formed out of pre-existing materials.
