DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE

THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

When in the course of the human events, it becomes necessary for one people to declare their independence, and to assume among the powers of the earth, the separate and equal station to which the laws of nature and of nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

Prudence, in such a case, dictates that慎重 should be exercised before a complete separation is made. In the first place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the causes which impel them to the separation. In the second place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the rights which they are entitled to.

And in the third place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the duties which they are bound to perform. And in the fourth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the consequences which will result from their separation.

And in the fifth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the reasons which justify their separation. And in the sixth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the measures which they are bound to take.

And in the seventh place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the principles which should govern their conduct. And in the eighth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the laws which should regulate their actions.

And in the ninth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the duties which they are bound to perform. And in the tenth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the consequences which will result from their separation.

And in the eleventh place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the reasons which justify their separation. And in the twelfth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the measures which they are bound to take.

And in the thirteenth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the principles which should govern their conduct. And in the fourteenth place, it is necessary that the people should be fully informed of the laws which should regulate their actions.
