THE TEXAS COMMISSION ON THE TEXAS

REPORT OF THE COMMISSION

THE TEXAS COMMISSION ON THE TEXAS

The Commission was organized by the Texas Legislature in 1967 to study the problems of the Texas economy and to make recommendations for their solution. The Commission has held numerous public hearings and has received many suggestions from the public. It has also conducted extensive research into the various factors affecting the Texas economy.

The Commission has found that the Texas economy is facing several major problems, including:

- 1. A declining rate of economic growth.
- 2. A high rate of unemployment.
- 3. A shortage of skilled labor.
- 4. A lack of investment in research and development.
- 5. A need for better transportation facilities.

The Commission believes that these problems can be solved by implementing the following recommendations:

- 1. Encourage private industry to invest in research and development.
- 2. Provide incentives for companies that create new jobs.
- 3. Improve the quality of the workforce through better education and training.
- 4. Invest in the development of new industries.
- 5. Improve the state's transportation system.

The Commission believes that these recommendations will help to revitalize the Texas economy and create a more prosperous future for the state.

The Commission has also found that there are many opportunities for the state to improve its economic performance. These opportunities include:

- 1. Attracting more foreign investment to the state.
- 2. Encouraging the growth of small businesses.
- 3. Improving the state's infrastructure.
- 4. Developing new markets for Texas products.
- 5. Encouraging the state to become a more attractive place for business.

The Commission believes that these opportunities can be realized by implementing the following recommendations:

- 1. Provide incentives for companies that attract foreign investment.
- 2. Encourage the state to become a more attractive place for business.
- 3. Improve the state's infrastructure.
- 4. Develop new markets for Texas products.
- 5. Encourage the growth of small businesses.

The Commission believes that these recommendations will help to realize the state's economic potential and create a more prosperous future for the state.

The Commission has also found that there are many opportunities for the state to improve its economic performance. These opportunities include:

- 1. Attracting more foreign investment to the state.
- 2. Encouraging the growth of small businesses.
