1. The first of these is the fact that the majority of the population of the United States is now living in urban areas. This is a result of the process of urbanization, which has been going on since the beginning of the 20th century. The process of urbanization is the movement of people from rural areas to urban areas. This movement is caused by a number of factors, including the search for better living conditions, the desire for education, and the need for employment. The result of this process is that the majority of the population now lives in cities and towns. This has a number of implications for the future of the United States. One of the most important is that it will lead to a concentration of resources in urban areas. This will mean that the government will have to spend more money on urban infrastructure, such as roads, bridges, and public transportation. It will also mean that the government will have to spend more money on urban social services, such as housing, health care, and education. This will be a major challenge for the government in the future.
